

BEYOND THE EXAMS

A Message from the Deputy Principal

Over the past few weeks, our school community has navigated one of the busiest periods of the academic year, with students completing their IGCSE examinations, Cambridge Checkpoint assessments, and year-end examinations.

I would like to commend all our students for the effort, perseverance, and commitment they have shown throughout this examination season. While assessments provide an opportunity to demonstrate what has been learned, they are only one part of a much larger educational journey. The preparation, discipline, resilience, and growth developed along the way are equally important achievements.

As we move beyond this examination period, I encourage students to remain engaged and make the most of the remaining weeks of the academic year. There are still many valuable learning experiences ahead, including enrichment activities, career exploration opportunities, school events, and moments to reflect on personal growth and accomplishments.

I would also like to thank our teachers and parents for their continued support and encouragement throughout this demanding period. Your partnership plays a vital role in helping our students succeed.

Let us finish the academic year with the same enthusiasm, determination, and positive spirit that have carried us through the challenges and successes of the past months.

Career Week: Discovering Our Paths – BY Danica

Career Week is something I have been looking forward to because it gives students a chance to learn about life beyond school. As students, we are often asked who we want to be in the future. The truth is, many of us are still unsure. I hope Career Week will help me gain a better understanding of all the different careers out there and what they are really like.

One of the things I am most excited about is hearing from people who are already working in their chosen fields. I think it will be great to learn about their journey, the challenges they faced, and what helped them succeed. Sometimes we only see the final results, not the sleepless nights of blood sweat and tears that went into building a career. Listening to them may help me understand what it takes to achieve my own goals.

I also hope Career Week will introduce me to career paths that I may not have considered before. With so many opportunities available today, choosing the right path can be challenging. By exploring a wide range of professions, I hope to gain a better understanding of my interests, strengths, and future aspirations, while discovering how the subjects I enjoy at school can connect to real-world careers.

I believe other students will benefit from Career Week as well. It can help us become more confident about our future and encourage us to ask questions like: What am I really interested in? Where is this going to lead me? It is also a reminder that success comes in many forms and that everyone has a unique journey. For students who are unsure about their future plans, Career Week may provide the inspiration and direction they need.

Overall, I think Career Week is a valuable experience because it connects what we learn in school to the real world. I am grateful for the opportunity to attend, and I hope it will help me make more informed decisions about my future. Most importantly, I hope it encourages all students to dream big, stay curious, and explore the many possibilities that lie ahead.

Wesak Day: A Celebration of Compassion and Reflection

Malaysia is a country rich in cultures, traditions, and celebrations. Earlier this month, Buddhists across the country observed Wesak Day, one of the most important days in the Buddhist calendar.

Wesak Day commemorates the birth, enlightenment, and passing of Siddhartha Gautama, who became known as the Buddha. For Buddhists, it is a day of reflection, prayer, and acts of kindness. Many devotees visit temples, participate in meditation sessions, offer alms to monks, and take part in charitable activities such as blood and organ donation drives.

One of the values often associated with Wesak Day is compassion. Buddhists are encouraged to show kindness to others, practise honesty, and live mindfully. These values are reflected in the Five Precepts, which promote respect for life, truthfulness, responsibility, and self-discipline.

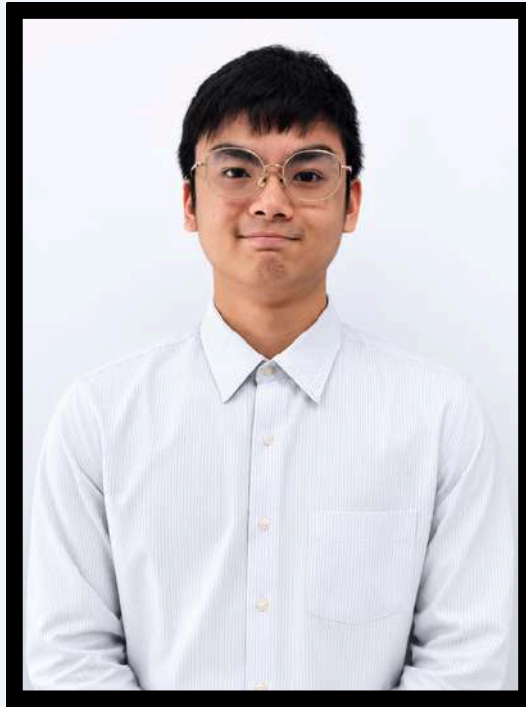

This year, thousands of devotees gathered at the historic Maha Vihara Temple in Kuala Lumpur to mark Wesak Day. The temple, which is celebrating its 130th anniversary, hosted prayers, blessings, meditation sessions, and a colourful float procession that attracted visitors from across Malaysia and around the world.

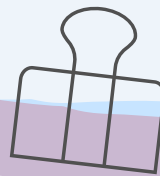

Beyond its religious significance, Wesak Day also reminds us of the importance of understanding and appreciating the diverse cultures that make up our society. As members of a multicultural and international school community, learning about different traditions helps us build respect, empathy, and stronger connections with one another.

At Imperial International School, we believe that education extends beyond textbooks. By learning about the festivals, beliefs, and customs of different communities, we gain a deeper appreciation of the world around us and the people we share it with.
